EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Write the conclusion first, then the evidence

An executive summary is the slide most people read. State what you found, what it means and what you ask for, in plain sentences.

1. Lead each point with the claim; follow it with the number or source that proves it.
2. Keep to three points. A fourth usually belongs in the appendix.
3. End with the decision you need, who makes it and by when.

STRATEGY

Two pillars, each with the actions that deliver it

Experience

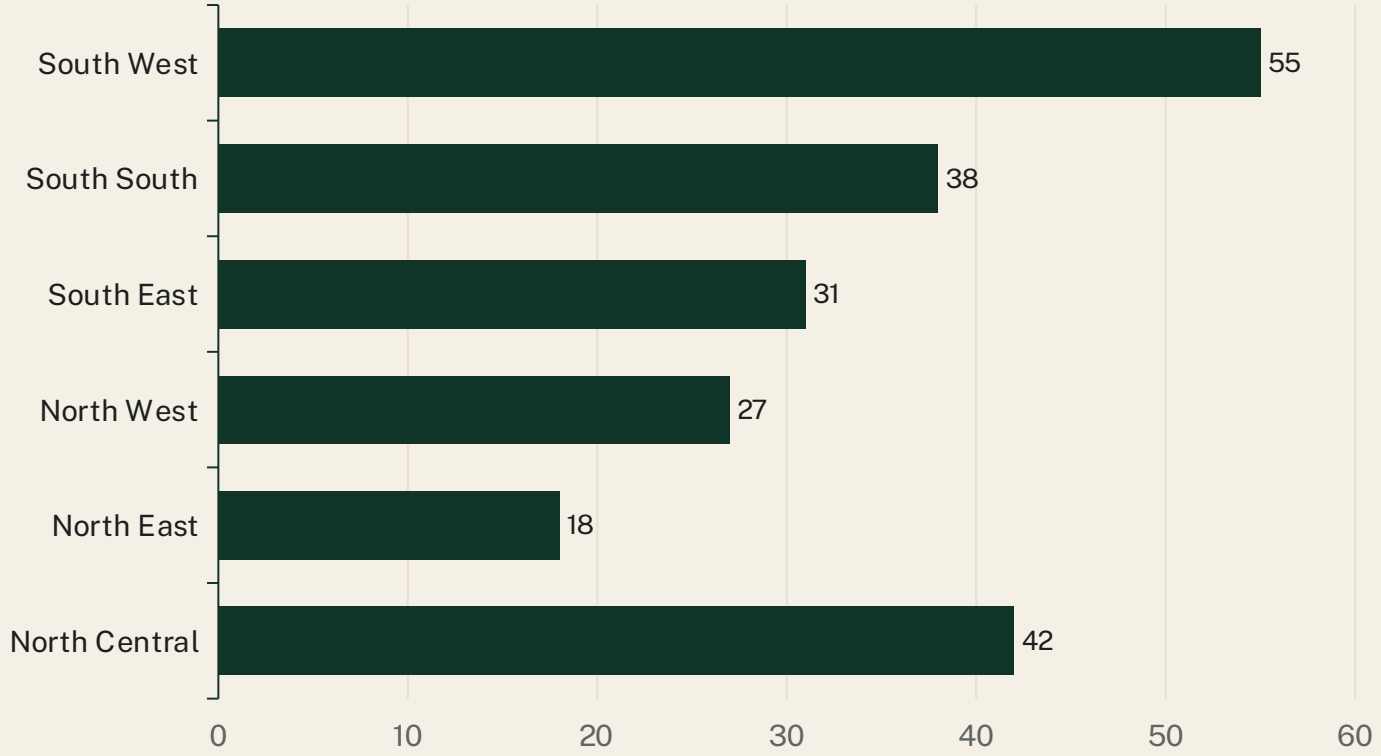

- Name the places and journeys to promote first.
- Say who the visitor is.
- Say how success will be counted.

Invest

- Name the projects ready for investment.
- State what each needs: land, approvals, capital.
- Say who the investor talks to.

FINDING

Use the finding as the title, so the slide can be read without the chart

WHAT THE DATA SHOWS

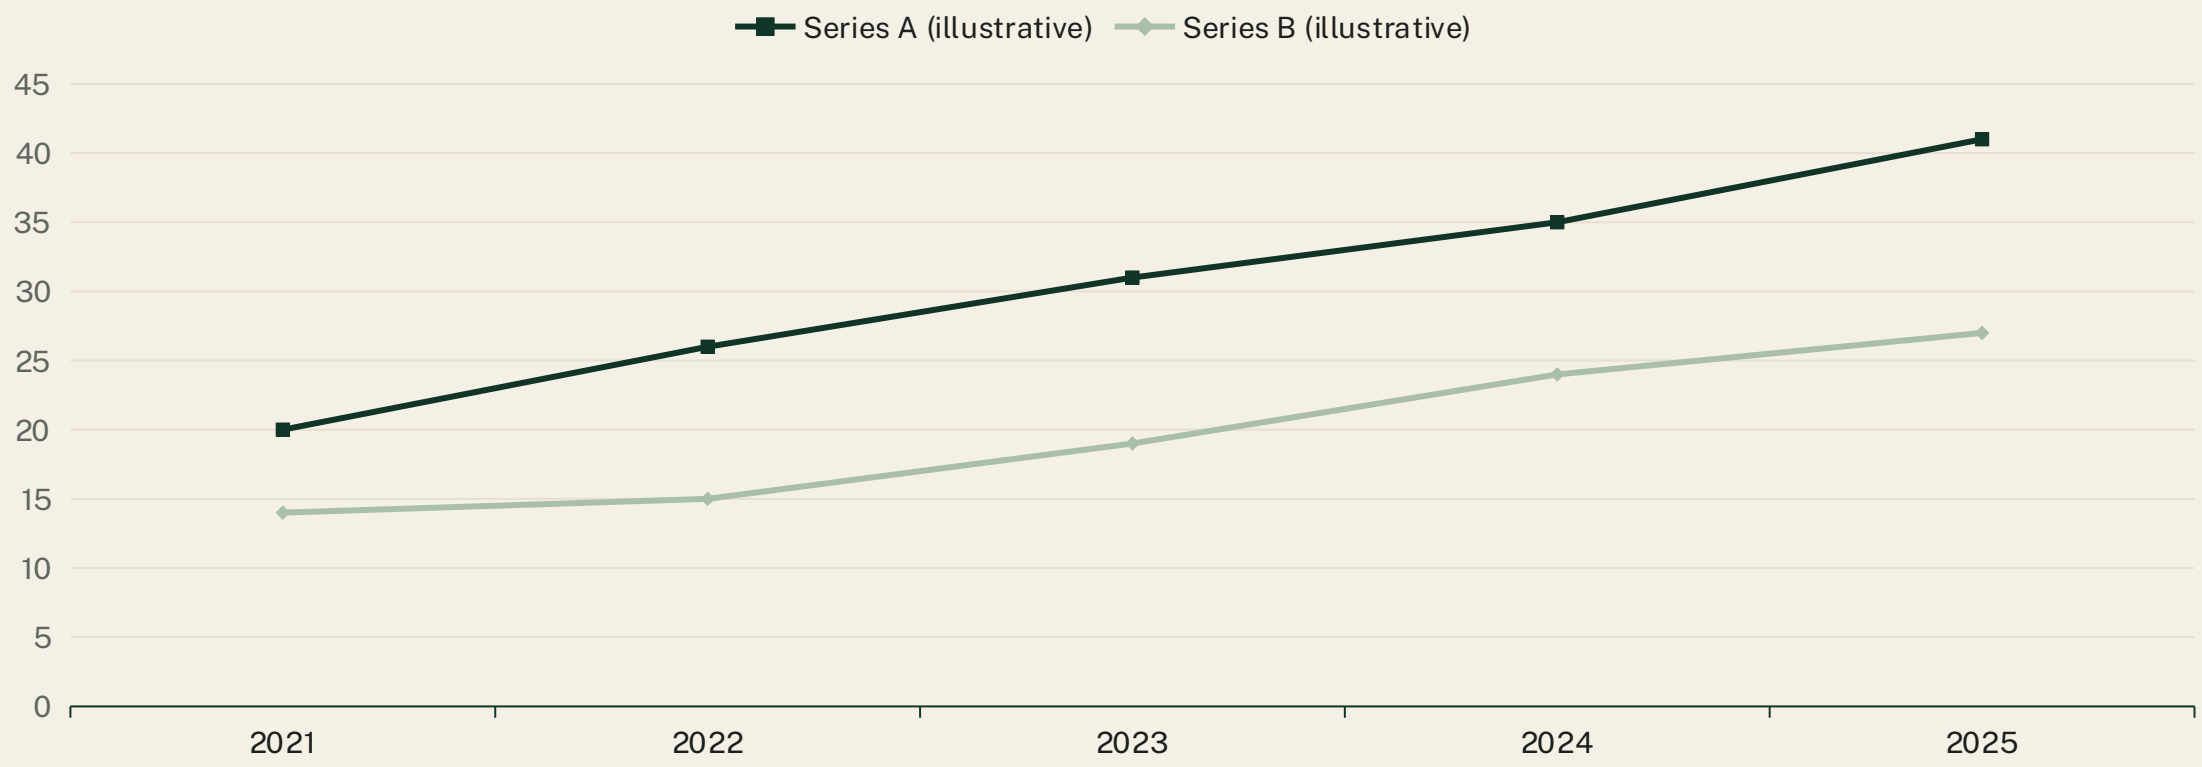

Explain the pattern in two or three sentences. Say how the data was collected and how many responses it rests on.

Illustrative data only: replace with verified figures and cite the source here.
